THE COLLEGE OF SAINT ROSE COMMENCEMENT LIVE BROADCAST

The College of Saint Rose is pleased to announce that the May 11th, 2013 commencement will be broadcasted live on the College's website. The College has taken this initiative so that all who are interested and unable to attend will be able to view this historic occasion.

We feel this streaming webcast will be especially helpful for guests of graduates who are very young or mobility challenged and for those who are unable to attend due to distance. Our experience is that the three hour ceremony, plus an hour or so waiting for the ceremony to begin (since many guests arrive an hour early), can be a strain for some. Often parents of young children are walking around the park and miss aspects of the ceremony that they had wanted to see. The distances involved between parking, the Times Union Center, restrooms and reception sites have been the reason for the College writing to graduates to suggest that some guests may wish to investigate renting wheelchairs. Those same graduates may want to consider the option of having their loved one watch the ceremony on the web.

Below is information about the live broadcast. Please note that we strongly suggest you try the link a few days ahead of time to make sure you are prepared for the broadcast. This is strongly recommended to ensure that you can receive the stream before commencement. The URL is:
